"Co-parenting: Children in Changing Families"

This class is court mandated

"Co-Parenting: Children in Changing Families" Many divorcing parents experience a dilemma -- at the time their children are in most need of them, they are least emotionally available. This class helps parents focus on the needs of their children during and after a divorce. Parents will receive help in separating spousal issues from parenting issues. Topics include grieving the loss and moving on, how children react to conflict, active listening, and other strategies to help kids and parents cope with divorce.

The fee for this class is $45 per person. To register: call 541-757-8068 or select one date from the list below and complete the registration form at the bottom of this page. Enclose your check for $45 made payable to Old Mill Center, and mail to the address shown above. Exact cash, debit, or credit cards are accepted the night of class. If the class you select is full, or if there are fewer than the required minimum number of participants registered for a class, we will call you to arrange another date. All classes are held at Old Mill Center from 4:30-7:00 pm. unless you hear otherwise; please attend the class you sign up for.
