- Uniform Trial Court Rule (UTCR) 2.130 requires that parties to domestic relations cases place certain information about themselves and other parties in a CIF when such information is required in a document filed with the court.
- The CIF is not available for public inspection except as authorized by law.
- Parties are allowed to see a CIF that contains information about them.
- A party who wants to see a CIF that contains information about the other party must ask for permission from the other party or the court by following the procedures set out in UTCR 2.130. However, UTCR 2.130(10)(c) requires the court to deny such a motion in situations that include cases in which a restraining order or other protective order is in effect that protects the party or the party's children from the person requesting inspection of the CIF.
