What facilitators can do:

- Help a person find the right forms and understand how to complete them.
- Explain how court procedures and rules work.
- Explain how to begin a court action.
- Refer to agencies or resources that provide legal services and information.
- Review documents and forms to make sure they are complete.

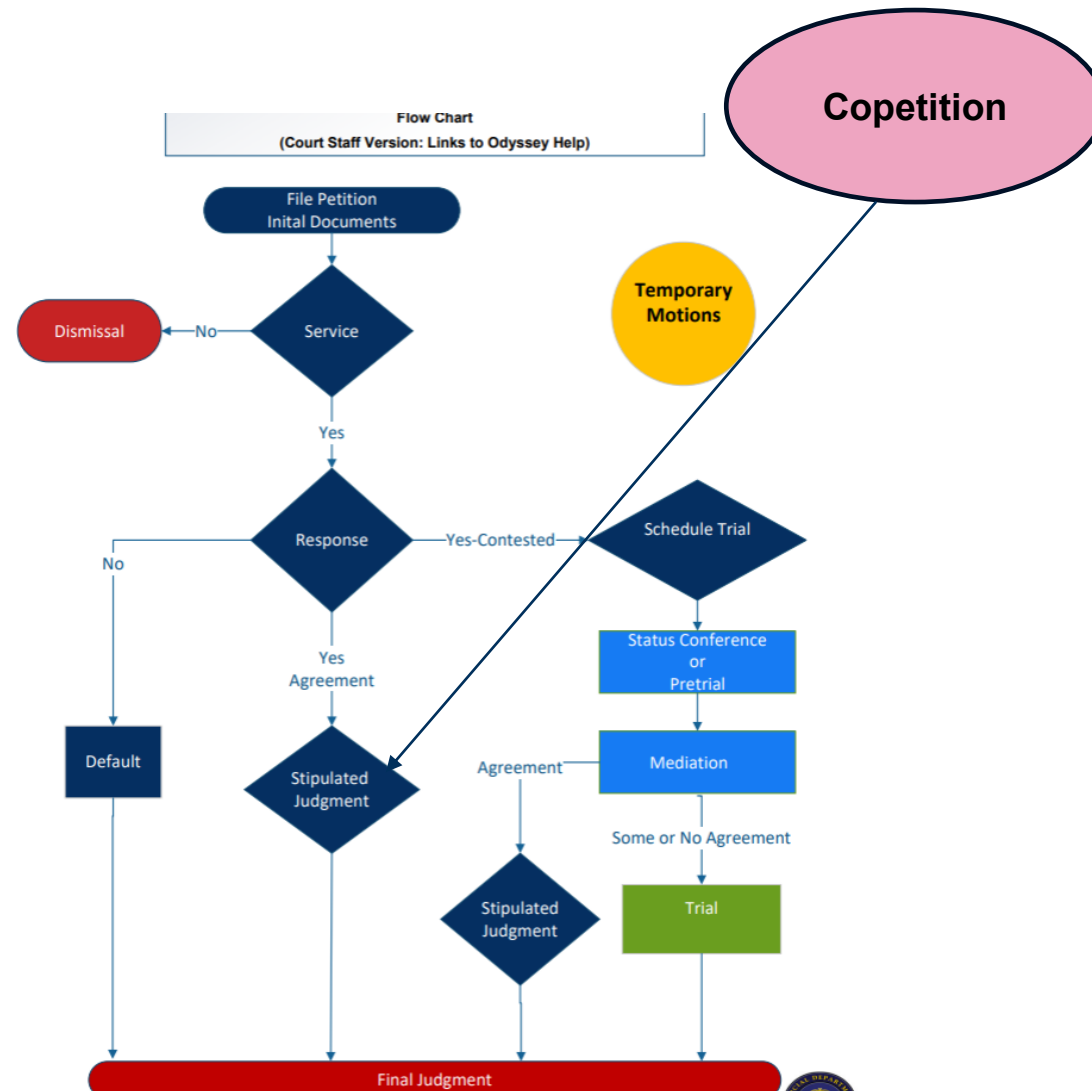

What facilitators cannot do:

- Recommend one procedure or form over another.
- Tell someone what they should do or give an opinion about their options.
- Advise or recommend someone take a particular action.
- Recommend a specific attorney
- Guess about the outcome of a case.
- Physically fill out a form for a person (Unless language/ADA need)
- Tell you a person what to write on a form or what to say in court.

Facilitators are not attorneys

When To Refer A Person To Facilitation:

- Successful or unsuccessful mediation before filing – can help with forms and filing process:
- Unsuccessful mediation after filing – can offer materials to prepare for representing self at trial/filing exhibits
- Unmarried parents: successful mediation on custody/parenting time – only remaining issue child support
- Married parents: successful mediation on custody/parenting time and they have an agreement on spousal support, property matters and bills
- Any situation that might seem immediate:
 - Temporary motions: immediate danger for child ,protection order, status quo to “freeze” where the child is living, temporary order for financial support

How A Family Law Case Proceeds!

CASE ROADMAP

When Else Can Facilitator Assist:

When something changes:

MODIFICATIONS

Parties can mediate and agree to changes before ever filing Motion for Modification

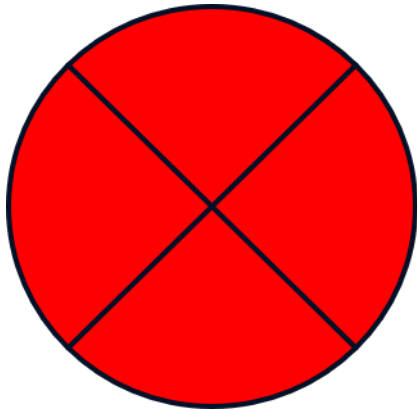

- Will need to complete and file a “Supplemental General Judgment”
- Still has to be signed by a judge to enforceable
- Only need to address terms they are changing, everything else can stay the same
- Do have to pay the modification filing fee when submitted

When someone isn't doing what they are supposed to:

ENFORCEMENT

Forms and assistance available

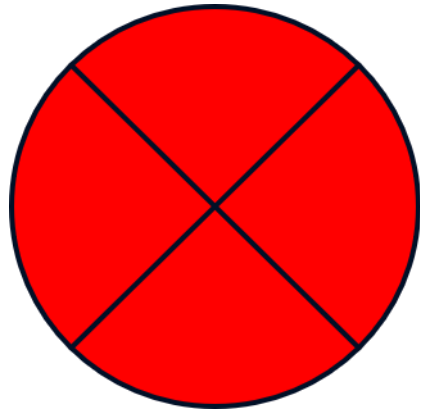

Warning: How To Properly Finish Your Case

- Signing a parenting time agreement does not finish your case
- A mediation agreement is not enforceable until it is put into a final court document called a General Judgment and signed by a judge
- When both sides are agreeing to everything it is called a “Stipulated General Judgment”

General Judgment Requires More Than A Parenting Agreement

There are other things the parties must decide on to finish case:

- Child support MUST be dealt with even if you are agreeing to none
- Medical coverage for child must be established
- Uninsured medical expenses
- Life Insurance/Child Tax Deduction

Parent Education Class Required

“Finish” Your Case

There are 2 documents needed to finish a case:

- Declaration in Support of Judgment
- General Judgment (with attachments)
 - Parenting Plan Agreement
 - Child Support Calculator (Required whether paying support or not)

Other terms you may hear used for these documents: “Stage 2”

Parties must get these forms and fill out them out to the best of their abilities BEFORE meeting with a facilitator.

Where they can get the forms: Oregon Judicial Department : Forms : Forms : State of Oregon

Final Notes From Facilitators:

MUST FILL OUT JUDGMENT FORM TO THE BEST OF THEIR ABILITY BEFORE COMING IN

- Facilitator can meet with one party or both to review forms
- Mistakes are OK – can be corrected until signed

SET REVIEW APPOINTMENT BEFORE PARTIES SIGN

Can review a stipulated judgment with only one party present but if other side has already signed cannot permit any changes to the document

Facilitator will not mediate with the parties on any remaining undecided issues

- They must come with all decisions already made
- If not = May mean another appointment

FEES

Must be dealt with – often were deferred at time of filing

How To Help Parties That Have Settled Custody/Parenting time

■ All Oregon Courts Require That The Parties Complete And Attach A Child Support Worksheet To The Judgment

- Even if they are agreeing to zero support
- Only exception is if they already have an existing child support order and want it to stay exactly the same (Usually see with unmarried parents)

You can show them where to find and complete the calculator and produce the worksheet

OR

Inform them that A facilitator can help them complete it

How you can help them prepare for completing worksheet/meeting with facilitator:

- Get as much supporting documentation for calculations together as possible:
pay stubs, day care costs, health insurance cost

Oregon Child Support Program - Guidelines Calculator

The screenshot shows the Oregon Child Support Program Guidelines Calculator website. The header includes a navigation bar with "ESCAPE THIS SITE", "Locations", "About Us", and "Contact Us". Below the header is a banner image of children's feet in rain boots. The main heading is "Support Guidelines Calculator". A note states "All figures are monthly except as noted." There is a "Clear Form" button. The form includes a section for "Relationship" with a text input for the caretaker's name and a dropdown menu. Below this are two "Select one" dropdown menus and a "None" option. A "Minor children only" checkbox is also present. At the bottom, there are input fields for dollar amounts, each preceded by a "$" symbol.

- Deviate by than 15%
- Rebuttal factors
- If agreeing to no support at all they must provide thorough reasons to support
- If they are not currently agreeing on the amount of support - They can meet with facilitator just to run the numbers to get an idea to possibly settle instead of going to trial: (judge is going to use the same calculator)
